

eHealth Network

Guideline on

Medical imaging studies and reports

RELEASE NOTES (Release 1.1, November 2024)

The eHealth Network (eHN) guidelines on Medical imaging studies and reports (MI) are the latest example on how the eHN interoperability efforts shape the way how health data exchange takes place around EU. The MI guidelines are the foundation for the crossborder exchange of medical imaging studies and reports in MyHealth@EU and can as well inspire other projects at European or national level.

The first release of the eHN MI guidelines results from the combined efforts of EU projects, stakeholders' contributions, Member States recommendations and concerns. However, it should be highlighted that this version should be used as solid platform for future improvements considering the many aspects of interest identified during the consultation phase and should be object of reflection and consideration.

Release 1.1 includes minor updates carried out by eHealth Network Consistency between eHealth Network Guidelines taskforce. The taskforce was assigned the task of reviewing all existing eHealth Network Guidelines to ensure consistency in content, the textual changes were agreed to be made. No revisions were made on the use cases in the Guidelines, or the use cases present in the European Health Data Space Regulation. This work could be done in a future iteration.

For further information, please contact the eHealth Network secretariat at:

eHEALTH-NETWORK@ec.europa.eu